Visiting the National Portrait Gallery

I am going to a museum called the National Portrait Gallery. It is a large building filled with art.

Outside of the museum I will see a sculpture of a cowboy on a big blue horse.
When I go in the museum, I will see a desk with friendly people. They answer questions and help people in the museum.

I will see security guards and signs in the museum. Security guards and signs keep people safe.
In the museum I will see art called portraits. A portrait shows what a person looked like.

A portrait can be a painting, a sculpture, a photo, or many other things.
The National Portrait Gallery has portraits of many important people, like Benjamin Franklin and Booker T. Washington.
Many people like me go to the Gallery to look at art.

People also like to relax in the courtyard. The courtyard has lots of plants and water on the floor. The courtyard looks like it is outside, but it is really inside.
