

Research Support Services from the Office of Research Information Services

Thornton Staples

Director, Office of Research
Information Services
Office of the CIO
Smithsonian Institution

The Office of Research Information Services was set up by OCIO to begin to provide a high level of IT service to the broad research community at SI. This presentation will describe an array of new services that we are either now providing or are in development. In particular, the talk will give an overview of the Sidora software environment that we are developing to help researchers manage the digital data that they create, and the Hydra high performance computing cluster that we provide to the community. We will follow up this presentation with more in-depth workshops at MCI for Sidora and Hydra at a later date.
